Dear Sally,

How are you? I visited Cheung Chau with my parents last Sunday. We went there by ferry. Let me tell you about Cheung Chau.

In Cheung Chau, there is a famous spot called Cheung Po Tsai Cave. Dad went inside the cave and pretended to be a pirate! He looked very smart and I took a photo for him!

“Where does this smell come from?” I asked. It comes from the food booths! Wow! The food looked great! I tried the giant fish balls, potato spirals and peace buns. The fillings of peace buns had different flavours, like red bean paste and white lotus seed paste. They were both yummy! We bought some souvenirs and some dried seafood. We also watched the Bun Snatching Competition at night. The bun tower was tall. What an exciting competition!

I will go hiking in Sha Tin next month. We will climb up the mountain to enjoy the beautiful scenery and take photos of Amah Rock. Would you join us? Write back soon.

Dear Sally,

How are you? I visited Tai Po and Sha Tin last Sunday. I went there by taxi with my family. Let me tell you about the trip.

First, we went to Lam Tsuen Wishing Trees in Tai Po. I made a wish for health for my family. I wrote it on a joss paper and threw the joss paper with an orange up onto the Wishing Tree. I tried many times throwing it onto the tree and it finally landed on top of the tree! I also bought some souvenirs for my classmates to wish them a lucky year.

Next, I went for a one-hour hike to Amah Rock. It was a long hike. When we got there, I saw a big rock. It was in an unusual shape. It looked like a woman carrying a baby on her back. The reason why they looked like a woman carrying a baby on her back was so heart-broken.

The story was about a fisherman who drowned into the sea, and his wife kept waiting and waiting for him. Day by day, his wife kept waiting. All the villagers asked, "Did he come back yet" The wife said in tears, "No..." The goddess was touched by the woman's love to her husband. She turned the wife and her baby into a rock and let the wife and her baby meet the husband in heaven. What an interesting legend!

I drew a painting of Amah Rock. It was difficult to draw. I wondered if the legend is real. Why was the rock that big? It was one-hundred times bigger than me. I even took beautiful photos after I painted.

I already felt excited for my next trip to Hong Kong Disneyland. Will you join me? Write back soon.

Best,
